

Lilien holds its Tech Elite ground

Lilien Systems, a leading IT infrastructure and big data software solutions provider and subsidiary of publicly-traded Sysorex Global Holdings Corp., has recently received excellent news: for the third time it has earned its place in CRN's Tech Elite 250, a carefully reviewed list of cutting-edge companies in the world of IT with the highest certifications in main industry standards. The prestigious recognition pleased Lilien Systems' President, Bret Osborn, who explains that it is a reward to the company's dedication to training and education. The staff of Lilien amasses over 200 technical certifications in different areas of information technologies, proof of the organization's commitment to knowledge.

The recognition in CRN's list for 2015 is also a nod for the company's professional services group. "They have years of experience working with leading technologies in all types of environments," Mr. Osborn stated in an official press release. The company, founded in 1984, relies on its well trained staff to deliver the purpose they declare in their mission statement: "Lilien Systems provides the people, process and technology to develop and implement the infrastructure for your mission-critical enterprise".

That infrastructure they are alluding to is spreading like wild fire. The need for big data analytics -one of Lilien Systems' many areas of expertise- is quickly reaching companies regardless of their trade. The clientele that the company tends to is spreading out in different branches, looking less at sizes of companies but at how fast data is needed.

"Gaming companies, for instance, need to have an analytic platform that works very, very quickly, and have it be able to analyse something in milliseconds. A retailer that does business online, a pharmaceutical company: any kind of business could be serviced by us," Mr. Osborn explains.

With industry-recognised professionals at their disposal, the company's core business is geared to help clients solve complex IT problems with the greatest business value available in the market. Alongside qualified experts, companies get to introduce new technological solutions to their everyday practices. Some of the many services offered by Lilien are IT infrastructure, big data and analytics, data migration and private cloud building and managing.

The field of big data, as latest market trends suggest, will mean a great amount of business for Lilien. "This trend is going to have a very long life and it is also something that we happen to do well. In the next five years, big data analytics will be built right into applications. Anything will have the capability of being analysed. That is scary, yes, but it is also exciting," Mr. Osborn states.
